Using Twitter.com you can take a mediocre site and turn it into a traffic generating one. In order to do so there are several things needed. First, you need to setup a twitter profile if you haven’t already. Once you have done so design a background for your profile. This can be easily done through Twitbacks.com. By doing so will give your profile a professional look and a great first impression on potential visitors. Your next step is to get followers.

Many people have their own strategies, programs, and so on to increase their followers on twitter but I have found great success with the following 2 strategies.

The first is the most obvious, of course, which is to go to other profiles and follow them. However, this can be counterproductive as most people won’t follow strangers or those they don’t share similar interests with. As a result, I have found more success using TwitterCounter.com’s Top 100 Followed profiles’ list and scanning the first few pages to find a profiles related to my sites' content. Once I have done so I will take 15 minutes to 1 hour to follow as many as their followers as possible.

Note:

When using this strategy I ALWAYS make sure I add followers from a profiles “Followers” list and not the “Following” list since they are more likely to follow me because they have already done so.

The second strategy is the lazy version of the first LOL!!! It requires the use of the site Twollo.com.

Twollo allows users to follow twitter profiles based on keywords and/or phrases that they have used in their tweets.

Once you are on twollo, login using your twitter username and password (Figure 1).

At the bottom, there are filter options: "Follow" (set to "up to 10"), "Add" (set to "an unlimited amount of"), "What" (set to "up to 10"), and "Using a" (set to "up to 100"). A dropdown menu is open for "Add", showing options from "up to 10" to "up to 500".

Below the filters, there is a section titled "You might like" and a note: "Using a... has tried to work out what your interests might be:".

At the very bottom, a small disclaimer reads: "Try and keep your text as an interest as a minimum, we can do better analysis of who to follow based on short phrases. For example a search for Paul Kinlan we will analyse Paul and Kinlan, whereas "Paul Kinlan" will be a very specific text which will used in the analysis engine."

After using one or both strategies you will need to wait 48 hours afterwards, at that time, you will go to Twitter Karma to view who hasn't become a follower. As you did on twollo you will login using your twitter username and password (Figure 3).

Those who have not followed you will display on the page; scroll down, click on “Check all” button which will select all the profiles listed above and click on “Bulk Unfollow”. Afterwards, a popup box will appear confirming that you have unfollowed the profiles listed; click the “OK” button (Figure 5).

Figure 5

In addition, I will do a similar check for those profiles I'm not following but are following me to return the favor making sure they don't unfollow me (Figure 6).

Figure 6

The above steps are repeated for the next 90 days. This process has generated up to 500 new followers per day for me. However, on average you should expect 125 – 300 new followers daily.
